AUSTRIAN AIR RAIDERS DROP BOMBS DIRECTLY ON LINE OF RAILROAD OVER WHICH THEY ARE TRAVELING

(By Evening Herald Leased Wire)
Rome, May 17.—Queen Helena and the Princesses Joannina and Matilda had a narrow escape in the attack by the Austrian air raiders on the train in which they were traveling last Monday from the point near the front to Venice on the way to Rome. Bombs dropped by the visitors struck directly on the line of the railroad over which they were passing.

King Victor Emmanuel accompanied Queen Helena and his children in a motor car to the station along the line of the railway between Udine and Venice. As the train was nearing Venice it was pursued by Austrian aeroplanes whose occupants evidently had been informed of the presence of the royal passengers. Both train and the railway line itself being in complete darkness, the aeroplanes missed their targets, although bombs exploded so near that they broke telephone wires along the line.

Meanwhile the war flights of Italian anti-aircraft batteries discovered the raiders who abandoned the chase shortly before the train reached Piastra.
